A stalkers dream: The software formulates a log of users movements, creating a mobile version of Facebook - something which has sparked concern among critics

KOMPAS.com - Imagine you are heading off to a restaurant when your phone buzzes and suggests a different eaterie where you might meet someone that shares your passion for art and literature.

Sound like the stuff of science fiction? Well, apparently not. Scientists have devised software which will allow smart phones to do much more than keep you in contact with family and friends.

Very soon, they claim, phones will be helping users make new friends by suggesting places to go where people with similar interests are likely to congregate. The system – named Jyotish after the Sanskrit term for Hindu astrology – creates a map of people's movements by tracking the wi-fi and Bluetooth connections on their phones to within around ten metres.

Eventually the technology would be able to go one step further, by matching their identities to social profiles and spotting situations where they may encounter a potential love match or work client.
